ONDAY...... MARCH 29, 1880 THE THREE TRAVELLING-BAGS.

There were three of them, all of shining ack—one on the top of the pile of trunks, seen the ground, and one in the owner's ad—all going to Philadelphia, all waiting be checked.

to be checked.

The last bell rang. The baggage-man bustled, fuming from one pile of baggage to mother, dispensing chalk to trunks, checks to the passeneers, and curses to porters, in approved railway style.

"Mine—Philadelphia!" cried, a stout military-locking man with enormous whisters and a red face, crowding forward as the baggage-man laid his hand on the travelling-bag.

"Won't you please give me a check for *Won't you please give me a check for this now?" entreated a pale, slender, care-fully-dressed young man, for the ninth time, holding out bag No. 2; "I have a lady to look after."

"Say! be you going to give me a check for this ere or not?" growled the proprietor of bay No. 3, a short, pox-marked fellow in a simbly overcoat.

"All right, gentlemen. Here you are," says the functionary, rapidly distributing e ebecks. "Philadelphia, this?"

"Yes, sir-1,052, 1,740, 1,020. All right."
"All aboard!" shouted the conductor. And the train moved slowly out of the

The baggage-man meditatively watched it as it sped away in the distance, and then, as if a thought suddenly struck him, shapped his thigh and exclaimed:

"Biest if I don't believe—"

"What?" inquired the watchman.
"That I've gone and gave them three last fellows the wrong checks. The cussed little black fellows are all alike, and bothered "Telegraph," said the switchman. "Never you mind," replied the baggage-

The scene shifts to the Continental Hotel, Philadelphia. Front parlor up-stairs. Ocexpants, the young gentleman alluded to as M. 2 and young lady. In accordance with the fast usages of the times, the twain had been made one in matrimony at 7:30 A. M., duly kissed and congratulated till 8:45, and deposited, hag and baggage, at the Conti-mental at 11:58.

They were scated on the sofs, the black roadcloth coat-sleeve encircling the slender waist of the gray travelling dress, and the jetty moustache in equally affectionate proximity to the g'ossy curls.

"Are you tired, dearest?"
"No, love, not much. But you are, aren't "No. darling."

"Don't it seem funny?" said the lady.

"That we should be married." " Yes, darling." "Won't they be glad to see us George's?"

"Of course they will."
"I'm sure I shall enjoy it so much. Shall we get there to-night?"
"Yes, love, if—"

Hap, rap, ran, at the door.

A basty separation took place between man and wife to opposite ends of the sofa; zhen, "Come in."

"An' ye please, sur, it's an M. P. is wait-ng to see yez."
"To see me—a policeman?"

There must be some mistake," "No, sur; it's yourself, and he's waiting in the ball beyant." "Well, I'll go to-no, tell him to come

"Yes, sir."

"Serry to disturb you, sir," said the M.
P., with a large brass star on his breast, appearing with great alacrity at the waiter's clow. "I believe this is your black value?"

"Yes, that is ours, certainly. It is Ju-Suspleious circumstances about that value, sir. Telegraph came this morning that a burglar started on the 8:45 Phila-delphia train with a lot of silver spoons in a black valise. Spoons marked T. B.; watehed at the ferry; followed it up here; took a peep inside. Sure enough, there were the spoons; marked T. B., too. Said it was yours. Shall have to take you in charge."

"Take me in charge?" echoed the brideis some mistake—it's all a mistake."

"S'pose you'll be able to account for the spoons being in your valise then?"

"Why—l—it isn't mine; it must be somebody else's; somebody has put them in here; it is some villainous conspiracy."

sobbed the little bride. "I tell you, sir," said the bridegroom, bristling with indignation, "this is a vile plot. What would I be doing with your pattry spoors? I was married this more-ng in Fifth avenue, and I am on my wed-Giog tour. I have high relations in New York. You'il repent it if you dare arrest "Oh, come now," said the incredulous Maial, "I've heard stories like that before. This ain't the first time swindlers have traveled in couples. Do you suppose I don't know nothing? 'Tain't no use; yon've just got to come to the station-house. Might as well go peaceably, 'cause

"Charles, this is perfectly dreadful. Our wedding night in the station-house! Do send for somebody. Send for the landloid to explain it." The landlord was sent for and came; the watters, and chambermaids, and bar-room founzers came without being sent for, and filed the room and adjoining hall—some to langh, and some to say they wouldn't have believed it, but nearly all to exult that the pair had been "found out." No explanation could be given, and the upshot where it would be hard to say which was was, in spite of tears, threats, rage, and expostulations, the unfortunate, newly-mar-ried pair were taken in charge by the relentless police, and marched down stairs route to the police-office.

And here let the curtain drop on the metancholy scene, while we follow the for-tures of the black value No. 2.

When the train stopped at Camden four rectionen got off and walked arm-in-arm rapidly and silently up one of the by-streets, and struck off into a footpath leading into a seduced grove outside the town. Of the first two one was our military friend. a seduded grove outside the lown. Of the first two one was our military friend in a bine coat, apparently the leader of the purty. Of the second two one was carrying a black value. Their respective companions walked with hasty, irregular strides, were abstracted and apparently ill

The party stopped.

"This is the place," said Captain Jones.
"Yes," said Dr. Smith.
The Captain and the Doctor conferred together. The other two studiously kept

Lucas done.
"Now for the pistols," whispered the laptain to bis fellow-second.
"They are all ready in the vallse," replied to Doctor.

They are all ready in the value," replied the Doctor.

The principals were placed ten paces west, and wore that decidedly uncomfortable sir a man has who is in momentary executation of being shot dead.

"You will fire, gentlemen, simultaneously, when I give the word," said the Captain. Then in an underlone to the Doctor:

"Quick, the pistols."

The Doctor, stooping over and fumbling the value, appeared to discover something which surprised him.

"Why, what the devil..."

"What's the matter?" asked the Captain, striding up. "Can's you find the

"Deuce a platel or cap but this."

whistle by the Captain, and a blank stare by the principals.

"Confound the luck," ejaculated the Captain: "If we haven't made a mistake and brought the wrong valles."

The principals looked at the seconds. The seconds looked at the principals. Nobody volunteered a suggestion.

At last the Doctor inquired: "Well, what is to be done?"

"D—d unlucky!" again ejaculated the Captain; "the duel can't go on."

"Evidently not," responded the Doctor, unless they brain each other with the hair-brush, or take a pop at each other with the cologne-bottle."

"You are quite sure there are no pistols in the valise?" said one of the principals, with suppressed eagerness, and drawing a with suppressed eigerness, and drawing a long breath of evident relief.

"We must go over to the city and get the city and get the pistols," proposed the Captain.

"And by that time it will be dark," said the Doctor.

"Yery unlucky!"

"We shall be the laughing-stock of the town," consolingly remarked the Doctor, "if this gets wind."

One word with you, Doctor," here inrposed the principal. They conferred. At the end of the conference with his principal the Doctor advanced to the Captain and conferred with him. Then the Captain conferred with his principal. Then Captain conferred with his principal. Then the seconds conferred with each other.

Finally, it was formally agreed between the contending parties that a statement would be drawn up in writing whereby principal No. 1 tendered the assurance that the offensive words—"You are a liar"—were not uttered by him in a personal sense, but solely as an abstract proposition in a general way, in regard to the matter of fact under dispute. To which principal No. 2 appends his statement of his high gratification at this candid and honorable explanation, and unqualifiedly with Irew the offensive words—"You are a scounthe offensive words—"You are a scoundrel"—they having been used by him under misappreheusion of the intent and purpose of the remark with which he had preceded them.

There being no longer a cause for quarrel the duel was of course ended. The princi-pals shook hands, first with each other, next with the seconds, and were evidently very glad to get out of it.

"And now that it is so happily settled," said the Doctor, chuckling and rubbing his bands, "it proves to have been a lucky mis-take, after all, that we brought the wrong valise. Wonder what the lady who owns it will say when she opens it and sees the pistols?"

Very well for you to laugh about it, growled the Captain, "but it's no joke for me to lose my pistols. Hair-triggers—best English make, and gold-mounted. There ain't a finer pair of shooters in America." "Oh, we will find them! We will go on a pilgrimage from house to house, asking if any lady there has lost her nighteap and found a pair of duelling-pistols." In a very good spirit the party crossed the river and inquired at the baggage-room in reference to each and all black leather travelling-bags that arrived that day; took note of where they were sent, and set out to follow them up. In due time they reached the Continental, and, as luck would bave it, met the unhappy bridal pair just coming down stairs in charge of the detective.

"What's the meaning of all this?" inquired the Captain. . "Ob, a couple of burglars caught with valise of stolen property."
"A valise! - what kind of valise?"

"A black leather valise. That is there."
"Here! Stop! Halloo! Police! Land lord! It's all right! You are all wrong! It is all a mistake. They got changed at the depôt. That lady and gentleman are innocent. Here is their valise, with her night-

Great was the laughter, multifarious th comments, and deep the interest of the crowd in all this dialogue, which they ap-peared to regard as a deligh ful entertainment got up expressly for their amuse-"Then you say this thing here is yours," said the detective, relaxing his bold upon the bridegroom, and confronting the Cap-

"Yes, it is mine." "And how did you come by these spoons?"

"Spoons, you lackanapes!" said the Captain; "duelling-pistols." "Do you call these pistols?" said the policeman, holding up to view one of the silver spoons marked T. B.

The Captain, astonished, gasped, "It is the wrong value again, after all."
"Stop, not so fast!" said the police funcby the importance of the affair he found himself engaged in. "If it so be how you've got the lady's valise, she is all right, story before the magistrate young man; because if you don't, you stand a smart chance of being sent up for six months."

"O, Charles! this is horrio! Do send bim away! O, dear! I wish I was home,"

"I wish I was home," in the case this is yours, and it comes on you to account for them as stolen spoons. Have to take you in charge, all four of ye." "Why, you impudent scoundrel!" roared the Captain; "I wish I had my pistols here; I'd teach you to insult a gentleman!" shaking his ü-t.

The dispute waxed fast and furious. The outsiders began to take part in it, and there is no telling how it would have ended had not an explosion, followed by a heavy fail and a scream of pain, been heard in the ad-joining room. The crowd rushed to the scene of the new attraction.

The door was fast. It was soon burst open, and the mystery explained. The thief who had carried off the Captain's valise by mistake for his own had taken it up to his room and opened it to gloat over the contents he supposed it to contain, thrusting his bands in after the spoons. In doing so the pistol had gone off, the bullet making a round hole through the side of the valise, and a corresponding wound in the calf of his leg.

struck up a friendship on the ground of their mutual mishap, which culminated in a supper, where the fun was abundant, and where it would be hard to say which was in the best spirits-the Captain for recovering his pistols, the bride for getting her night-cap, the bridegroom for escaping the station-house, or the duellists for escaping each other. All resolved to "mark that day with a white stone," and henceforth to mark their names on their black travelling bags in white letters.

The other Sunday the Sabbath schools had a lesson which involved an explanation of the term hypocrite. In one of the infant schools the teacher labored very earnestly to give her class a correct idea of the word. One little girl said she always thought it was a great big animal, and she guessed she had seen one at a show. "Oh," the teacher said, "a hypecrite is a man who makes be-lieve to be real good when he isn't. Some-times a man will give a lot of money to a church just to make people think that he is better than anybody else." "Well, my papa ain't a hypocrite," spoke up a little girl back in the corner of the seat, "for he only gives a penny every Sunday."—Carbondale (Pa.) Leader.

"There is a man," they pointed him out to me, "who only three years ago was braking on the railroad, and now he is worth $10,000." This was true. I had also seen, but a few days before, a man who only three years ago was worth $10,000, and is now scrambling through life along the top of a freight train, where he twists brakes just for the love of it and $40 a month. The other fellow has got his $10,000, that is all. These sudden changes of fortune are just phases of practical communism, after all.—Roaming Robert, Hawkeys.
